

Who can use the FGNA service marks and certification marks, and where?

Guild Certified Feldenkrais Practitioners^{CM}, Authorized Trainee Awareness Through Movement[®] teachers, and others authorized by FGNA can use certain service marks and certification marks on materials directly related to the practice of the Feldenkrais Method[®], and training programs accredited by FGNA.

Are there rules I need to follow when using the FGNA Marks?

These Guidelines are a user-friendly guide to the rules in the FGNA Service Marks, Certification Marks and Trademarks Policy (“Policy”). For more information, see the Policy, following page 3 of this document.

What about using the FGNA Marks in articles or books?

You need to follow the Policy if you are promoting or advertising your work, or providing a service (for example, presenting an Awareness Through Movement lesson in a book). This applies to materials that originate in or are intended for consumers in the US or Canada. For books and articles that are informational in nature, if no service is being provided, we request but do not require that the Policy be followed.

What rules apply when I’m teaching an event?

When teaching applications of the Feldenkrais Method in events that include participants who aren’t authorized to use FGNA service marks:

- a. Advertising needs to include a statement that participants are not authorized to use FGNA service marks unless they have received authorization from FGNA. (See Policy for details.)
- b. Attendees who aren’t authorized to use FGNA service marks are required to sign a form that has been approved by FGNA. (See Policy.)
- c. At the beginning of the presentation, the presenter must inform participants if the class includes participants who are not authorized to use the service marks (for example a workshop teaching hand-on skills, where the majority of the participants are Feldenkrais practitioners).

For Trainees:

When can I begin using the service marks?

After you complete 400 hours of training, receive approval of your Educational Director, and return the “Service Mark Authorization for Trainee Awareness Through Movement Teacher” form to FGNA.

Which service marks can I use?

See the following page for a list of service marks you may use, after you receive authorization. You may only use “Functional Integration[®]” and “FI[®]” for free practice sessions. You must indicate your trainee status, and you may not use the service marks in any way that implies professional Feldenkrais practitioner status. Your authorization will end when you leave the training program. When you graduate, you will need to become certified in order to continue using the marks.

How do I use the service marks and certification marks?

These rules apply to all electronic and printed materials that originate in the US, or are intended for prospective consumers in the US. For further information, please see the Policy, following page 3 of this document.

1. Say it with Symbols

Include the [®] or ^{CM} symbol after the first or most prominent use of each service mark or certification mark that is used in a document. (Each page in a website is considered a document.) (R) and (CM) may also be used.

2. Use the Adjectival Form

Use each service mark as an adjective at least once in each document. For example: "We offer classes in the Feldenkrais Method of somatic education." "I teach Feldenkrais lessons." "You can take my Awareness Through Movement classes." In each of these cases, the mark is followed by a noun or prepositional phrase. The chart above shows examples of nouns or phrases that may be used with the marks.

3. Include a Footnote

Include a statement acknowledging FGNA's ownership of the service marks and/or certification marks being used, except in cases such as business cards, where it's not possible due to space constraints. On websites, this statement may be published through a link in a footer. For example:

The following are service marks or certification marks of the Feldenkrais Guild of North America: Feldenkrais[®], Feldenkrais Method[®], Functional Integration[®], Awareness Through Movement[®], ATM[®], FI[®], Guild Certified Feldenkrais Teacher[®], and Guild Certified Feldenkrais Practitioner^{CM}.

4. Use a Distinctive Style (optional)

You may distinguish the marks from the surrounding text. You may use italics, bold, color, style or other means.

5. Follow Rules for Events

See page 1 of these Guidelines, and the Policy, for details of requirements when teaching applications of the Feldenkrais Method in events (e.g. workshops, seminars, mentoring groups, advanced trainings) that include participants who are not authorized to use FGNA service marks. The requirements include statements in advertising and at the event, and having participants sign a form.

6. Do not Imply Distinctions

Do not use service marks and certification marks in a way that implies distinction in status, superiority, or geographic exclusivity.

7. Reference to the Teachings of Moshe Feldenkrais

If you develop a new service, you may not use FGNA service marks to refer to that new service. However, you may describe it as being “based on the teachings of Moshe Feldenkrais”, or other similar phrase, as long as the statement is not false, misleading or confusing.

8. Lapse of Certification or Authorization

If your certification or authorization to use FGNA service marks lapses, you must not use FGNA service marks or certification marks to refer to yourself or to the services that you provide. However, you are always free to describe your services as being “based on the teachings of Moshe Feldenkrais”, or other similar phrase. If you have completed an accredited Feldenkrais training program, you may say so, as long as your statement is not misleading or confusing, and doesn’t imply that you are a Feldenkrais practitioner or authorized to use the service marks and certification marks.

APPENDIX B: Teaching Applications of the Feldenkrais Method in Events

(e.g. Workshops, Seminars, Mentoring Groups, Advanced Trainings)

Feldenkrais Functional Integration and Awareness Through Movement are more than the set of methods and techniques used by Feldenkrais teachers; they encompass a unique way of understanding and approaching issues of human functioning and human learning. Competency can only be acquired through a long and intensive process of the kind employed in accredited Feldenkrais Professional Training Programs.

Certified practitioners may appropriately teach methods of touch or other forms of "hands-on" work or ATM in a variety of contexts.

Requirements for events that teach unauthorized individuals the pedagogy and approaches of the Feldenkrais Method:

Teachings of the Feldenkrais Method should not be diluted, diminished, or confused with other approaches, especially with other non-functional approaches, as the public benefits from the clarity of these experiences.

Advertising must state that participation in the event does not give participants the right to use FGNA service marks, and that only individuals who have received authorization from FGNA will be allowed to use FGNA service marks, and to practice Functional Integration, Awareness Through Movement, or the Feldenkrais Method of somatic education.

All attendees who are not authorized to use FGNA service marks will be required to sign a form that has been approved by FGNA. (form may be in paper, or online)

Who may attend the event:

The public benefits by having the teachings of Moshe Feldenkrais available to professionals in other fields. This allows other professionals to be informed by these teachings, though they will not be practicing the Feldenkrais Method.

Language in teaching event (imparting insights and skills):

At the beginning of the presentation, there must be a statement about the composition of the class, if there is one or more who is/are not certified in use of the service marks.
